Market Street grocery stores raise more than $31,000 for local charities through DFW Restaurant Week campaign

FRISCO, Texas — A successful DFW Restaurant Week donate-at-the register campaign resulted in $31,365.94 being donated to two North Texas nonprofit organizations on Thursday. Market Street grocery stores, alongside Audacy, presented the funds to the North Texas Food Bank and Lena Pope, with each organization receiving half of the total raised by Market Street locations throughout the Metroplex.

Celebrating 30 years, DFW Restaurant Week has raised close to $14 million in donations for its charity partners over the past three decades. More than 160 restaurants across the Metroplex participated in the campaign. Guests of participating restaurants had a portion of their meal donated to the partner charities, and they also had the opportunity to make an additional contribution.

During the campaign, guests at Market Street had the opportunity to donate at the register during checkout or purchase a special DFW Restaurant Week coupon/recipe book with recipes created by Market Street's executive chef, Matt Crowson with proceeds going to the partner charities.

"Market Street is proud to continue supporting DFW Restaurant Week and the incredible impact this campaign has across North Texas," said Robert Bollinger, district manager for The United Family. "It's a unique opportunity to bring our community together around local restaurants while also supporting organizations doing important work for our neighbors. We're grateful to play a part in providing these funds to the North Texas Food Bank and Lena Pope and helping extend their impact throughout the communities we serve."

"DFW Restaurant Week is more than great dining — it's also about the incredible generosity of our North Texas community," said Meredith Moeller, Audacy's director of DFW Restaurant Week. "As we celebrate 30 years of dining out and giving back, we're especially grateful to partners like Market Street who help extend the impact of our participating restaurants. This generous contribution is a wonderful example of how our partners and their customers come together to support the North Texas Food Bank and Lena Pope and their important work in our community."
